

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method and a device for the frequency-band dependent distribution and influencing of data signals of a WDM system, as a result of which a temporary rectification and subsequent correctly sequenced separation into the opposed propagation directions of the data signals which in themselves run in opposite directions are achieved by using a bidirectional interleaved channel arrangement.